SURROUNDED BY MADNESS
A Memoir of Mental Illness and Family Secrets

Rachel Pruchno, Ph.D.
Prologue

January 17, 2011. Sophie is eighteen years old.

As Sophie opened the front door, I was hit by a blast of frigid air. She picked up the three white plastic garbage bags she had hastily stuffed with her clothes and makeup, her toothbrush thrown in as an afterthought. She turned to look at me, her hazel eyes dancing with excitement. And then my daughter walked out of my life.

I watched as she descended the steps, her ponytail bouncing to the rhythm of her stride. Slipping on a small patch of ice, she steadied herself as she advanced toward the waiting car. In the moonlit darkness, I barely made out the car’s driver, her latest can’t-live-without-him boy, the twenty-one-year-old heroin addict she’d met just weeks ago in the psychiatric hospital. The tip of his cigarette glowed as he moved it to his mouth and then away. The smell of rancid tobacco from her clothes lingered in the hall. As the car pulled away, its one working headlight cast a shadow on the snow-covered driveway. Its muffler scraped the pavement. Shivering, I closed the door.

The antique clock my husband Josh’s great-grandfather had handcrafted chimed eight times, its mellow peal signaling Sophie’s departure. The odor from the fish I’d fried for dinner still hung in the air. While I wished she would change her mind and reverse the few steps she had taken, I knew she would not. This was, after all, the child who made one frightful decision after the next and never looked back. No, once Sophie set her mind to something, there was no turning back.
I glanced at the abstract image of the colorful neuron we had hung proudly on our dining room wall. Sophie had painted it for her senior art project just months ago. Her teacher insisted it was good enough to be displayed in The Museum of Modern Art. Not only was Sophie a talented artist, she also was lauded as an up-and-coming actress, and the poetry she wrote was exquisite.

Sophie’s dog Dunkin shot back his big ears. He barked as he raced from the living room window to the dining room window and then back again, trying to alert me to the dangers awaiting her, beseeching me to stop her, to make her come home. Travis, our black Lab, took his cue from Dunkin and added his raspy yelp to the ruckus. As the car drove down the street, Dunkin howled.

In his soft tenor, Josh continued explaining the complexities of an algebra problem to our son Aaron. I sank into the blue leather sofa in the dimly lit living room, feeling hollow and bereft. Travis rested his head in my lap. My body shook uncontrollably as I sobbed into his coarse short fur. I hadn’t experienced this mix of abandonment, fear, and sadness since my mother’s suicide nearly thirty-six years ago.
About Rachel Pruchno, Ph.D.

Author of Surrounded By Madness: A Memoir of Mental Illness and Family Secrets

Rachel Pruchno is Endowed Chair & Professor of Medicine at Rowan University’s School of Osteopathic Medicine and serves as Director of Research at the New Jersey Institute for Successful Aging. She earned her Ph.D. in Human Development and Family Studies at Penn State University. Dr. Pruchno has been the Principal Investigator on numerous research grants funded by the National Institute of Mental Health, the National Institute of Aging, the National Institute of Nursing Research, the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, the Retirement Research Foundation, and the Cleveland Foundation. She has published nearly 100 peer-reviewed articles in top scientific journals, authored 10 invited book chapters, and co-edited Challenges of an Aging Society: Ethical Dilemmas, Political Issues. She has served as Editor-in-Chief of the leading scientific journal The Gerontologist since 2011 and produces a blog column “All in the Family” for Psychology Today magazine. She is married with four children, two of whom are dogs.

www.RachelPruchno.net

Dr. Pruchno encourages you to:

- Subscribe to her Psychology Today blog at www.psychologytoday.com/blog/all-in-the-family.
- “Like” Surrounded By Madness on Facebook at www.facebook.com/surroundedbymadness.
- Follow her on Twitter @RachelPruchno.

Visit the book’s website at www.SurroundedByMadness.net to watch the book trailer video on YouTube.com. You’ll also find links to the author’s newspaper Op-Ed commentaries on mental illness and to radio and podcast interviews featuring the author.

Surrounded By Madness is available in a softbound print edition and all major eBook versions exclusively through online booksellers including Amazon.com, BarnesAndNoble.com, and the Apple iTunes store.